Hi-Tech Home Celebrates Another Consecutive Record Year of Growth and Recognition

Industry and consumer awards highlight accomplishments along with revenue growth for leading home technology provider

Clovis, Calif., January 17, 2012 —Hi-Tech Home, a leading home technology provider in the central San Joaquin Valley, once again celebrated a banner year both in terms of awards and revenue. The company was recognized within its industry and by consumers for awards recognizing its innovation and overall customer service, while also posting an increase of year-over-year revenue of more than 35 percent.

Hi-Tech Home's accomplishments last year included the The Central Valley's 2011 People's Choice Award for the best "Home Theater Technology Company" for the second consecutive year. The 2011 People's Choice Awards, produced by The Fresno Bee, relies entirely on votes from the public to determine winners. Hi-Tech Home also claimed a 2011 Best of Clovis Award in the "Stereo & Hi-Fi Equipment Installation" category by the U.S. Commerce Association (USCA).

Highlighting its industry recognition, Hi-Tech Home received a Control4® Dealer Award as Region MVP. The Control4 Dealer Awards recognize dealers for superior business practices, service and technical support to clients, and sales volume. Awards include recognizing excellence in Control4 projects in categories such as lighting, multi-room audio, security, climate, and retrofit.

Jay Cobb, president of Hi-Tech Home, also received the Registered Outreach Instructor designation from the Custom Electronic Design & Installation Association enabling him to deliver multiple courses approved for continuing education credit through the American Institute of Architects, the American Institute of Building Design, Interior Design Continuing Education Council, governed Interior Designer associations, the National Association of Home Builders, and the National Association of the Remodeling Industry.

“Recognition from our community, our customers and our industry partners is very meaningful to us, and reinforces our commitment to excellence,” said Cobb. “We’re thrilled to have achieved the level of success that we did last year and look forward to much more in 2012 and beyond.”
